NATIONAL LISTING OF VALIDATED BRUCELLOSIS-FREE HERDS

A swine herd that has been blood tested for brucellosis and found to be free of the disease is designated as a Validated Brucellosis-Free Herd. This term will replace the designation "Certified Brucellosis-Free Herd" that was used in the past in various State swine brucellosis eradication programs. Reason for the change is that the term "certified" is generally associated by hog producers with the meat-testing programs of the purebred swine associations--as in "Certified Litter" or "Certified Sire".

Swine herds are Validated Brucellosis-Free under procedures recommended by the United States Livestock Sanitary Association and approved by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the cooperating states.

Validation is granted on the basis of two (2) consecutive negative brucellosis tests on the entire breeding herd made thirty (30) to ninety (90) days apart. This includes all breeding animals that are six (6) months of age and over. Validation is effective for twelve (12) months and applies to all offspring of breeding animals tested, including Specific Pathogen-Free (SPF) pigs from such herds. Herds may be revalidated at the end of each twelve (12) month period upon evidence of a negative herd test.

Additional swine herds are Validated Brucellosis-Free, or revalidated, each month of the year. The herds listed are those that had been reported by the various states as of July 15, 1963. When the eligibility of a herd is questioned ask to see the herd owners Validated Brucellosis-Free Herd certificate or farmstead sign.

CAUSE OF SWINE BRUCELLOSIS...

Swine brucellosis is caused by Brucella suis, a strain of bacteria which also can cause human brucellosis, or undulant fever. This disease is an important public health problem which affects thousands of farmers, livestock handlers, meat processors, and butchers. In 1960 some 65 percent of the human brucellosis reported in the United States was thought to be of swine origin. This is a notable change since 1957, when 60 percent was of cattle origin and only 40 percent of swine origin. Attention is thus focused on swine as the remaining reservoir of the disease.

For information concerning swine brucellosis eradication activities and the Validated Brucellosis-Free Herd program contact your county agent, veterinarian or State-Federal Animal Disease Eradication representatives.

SYMPTOMS OF SWINE BRUCELLOSIS...

Symptoms are not a reliable guide for detecting the disease because they may vary from animal to animal--and in some cases do not appear at all. For this reason, swine brucellosis exists in many herds without being suspected. Major symptoms are:

Failure to settle. Infected sows and gilts often come back into heat 4 to 8 weeks after breeding because of abortions which occur so early they are not noticed.

Abortions, weak pigs. Abortions can occur at any stage of pregnancy. Birth of stillborn or weak pigs also are common. Sows that have aborted once usually farrow normal litters thereafter, although they remain as carriers and spreaders of the disease.

Lameness, stiffness of joints. Infection sometimes localizes in joints and bones, causing joint swelling, lameness and posterior paralysis.

Sterility. Swine brucellosis can cause either temporary or permanent sterility in both sows and boars. Don't wait for symptoms to appear. Blood test all adult animals in your herd on a regular basis. This is the only certain procedure available to determine if infection is present in your herd.

Purchase boars--and other replacement breeding stock--from Validated Brucellosis-Free Herds. If boars are purchased from nontested herds, blood test all additions at the time of purchase and again thirty (30) days later. Keep new animals isolated until both tests prove them to be free from infection. This will provide some protection against introducing swine brucellosis into your herd.

The various breeds are identified by code letters as follows:

B = Berkshire
Bl = Black
C = Chester White
D = Duroc
Gr = Grade
H = Hampshire
He = Hereford
Hy = Hybrid
In = Inbred
L = Landrace
M = Mixed Breeds
M1 = Minnesota #1
M2 = Minnesota #2
Ma = Montana
P = Poland China
S = Spotted (Poland China)
T = Tamworth
W = Wessex or Saddleback
Wh = White
X = Crossbred
Y = Yorkshire
